CHARGE GIVEN PASSPORTS.

The fact that Charge O'Shaughnessy had been handed his passports by General Huerta added an acute aspect to the situation, but has been more or less expected. The interests of the United States will be looked after by one or two of the other foreign legations as was the case in the time of the Spanish-American war. Secretary Bryan said that the mere withdrawal of the charge d'affaires did not necessarily mean war. He referred to the fact that precedent showed incidents where war did not follow the departure of a minister in charge with his passports. Reports that O'Shaughnessy had reached Vera Cruz were not credited by the State department. El Paso, Tex., April 23. - General Carranza, Pancho Villa and the Constitutionalists do not believe the action of the United States against the Huerta government is justified In a reply to a request from Washington that a statement of their position be given, the first chief of the Constitutionalist party, Carranza, sent a long message to President Wilson. When Roberto Pesqueira. the representative in the United States of Carranza, was asked if Carranza had given out any outline of program to President Wilson, he said that he had not.

Americans on the border believe that the only way trouble would be averted between the Americans on this side of the line and the Mexicans on the other is for the rebels to continue passive. ## The Mexican Conditions

No matter what theory may be held as to the real offending faction, no matter who or what was in the forefront as the mmediate cause and no matter against whom or against what faction it is the announced intention to proceed, the fact that this nation will soon be at war with Mexico cannot be denied.

Each passing hour makes it more apparent that the movements of the forces of this nation cannot long be restricted to a movement against Huerta and his adherents and supporters, both in and out of the army, alone.

Not all of the Mexican people are openly allied with one or the other of the contending factions. There are still hundreds of thousands of Mexicans who have held aloof from any active participation in the struggles of the last half dozen years. The danger is that both the Huerta faction and the Carranza faction will fear that to remain passive, or to become the open allies of this nation, in a conflict which involves only one faction will result in alienating the support of the great number of Mexicans who have so far not taken part in the conflict.

Avowal of hostility to the United States will, in all probability, be made by both the Huerta faction and the Carranza faction before this country has made much progress in the ampaign which has been decided upon.

The President and his advisors could not have been unmindful of the existence of such conditions and while in the mitial stages of the conflict, the forces of the United States may be directed against one faction, open hostility of the other action, it is apparent, cannot long be postponed.

So far the Constitutionalists have committed no overt act which would justify this nation in directing a movement of the land and sea forces against them. The Huerta faction, Friday southern portion; moderate to which, according to the theory under which this nation is pro- fresh northeast to southeast winds. ceeding, has usurped the government of the Mexican people and which is now holding that government by force, has committed an overt act which demanded, imperatively, that this portheast to east winds. nation proceed against that faction.

control the destinies of the Mexican people, we may concede that he is morally and mentally as unfit as Huerta, we may concede that his conduct thus far proves him to be equally as \$ vicious as Huerta, but this nation, refusing to recognize any government in Mexico, can only direct the movements of the army and navy against the offending forces.

The aggressions of Huerta, a usurper, and his faction with whom Carranza and Villa and their forces are now engaged in open warfare, cannot be treated as a cause for war against the Constitutionalists.

Because the movements of the land and naval forces of this nation are thus far directed only against Huerta and his faction, it does not follow that this nation has allied itself with Villa and his forces nor that it is even operating in sympathy with the Constitutionalist forces.

When another faction in Mexico which has succeeded in wresting the government of the land from the people, or when an armed force attempting to appropriate the government of the Mexican people, offends this nation, then, and then only, will it be proper to send the armed forces of the United States

The situation is peculiar in its features. The President s confronted with a condition which demands careful consideration, one which must be dealt with with great caution to avoid complications of a more serious nature.

Every citizen should refrain from arriving at hasty conclusions and the expression of opinions until the conditions are thoroughly understood.

Those Americans who are righteously indignant at the atrocities committed by Villa and his forces, should not find fault with the National government for not now simultaneously with the movement against Huerta, directing a hostile movement against the Constitutionalists.

TRAVEL 620 MILES ON SKIS.

Russian Soldiers Cover Distance In Twenty-three Days.

Petersburg.-The three officers and sixty-four noncommissioned officers and men of the Ismailovsky Guards regiment, who have reached Tsarskoe Selo from Archangel on skis have accomplished a remarkably fine performance, having covered the distance of more than 620 miles in twen-

Most of the country traversed was hilly and thickly wooded. The wind had cleared away most of the snow over a considerable stretch and intermittent thaws impeded the progress of the party. On two occasions packs of wolves hovered around the skiers.

In some of the remoter districts the excitement among the peasants, some of whom took them for a band of esthat were the advance guard of a foreign army invading Russia, and in several villages the children ran away and hid themselves in the woods.

The greatest difficulty experienced by the party was in the transport of provisions and reserve skis. These were carried on borseback, but numerous re lays of horses had to be requisitioned. The equipment of the men weighed about twenty pounds.

Carranza's Defiant Statement Causes Many Conferences at Washington, and Brings Forth a Reply From Pres. Wilson-Latter Assures Mexicans We Have No Quarrel With Them, but With Huerta and His Followers.

By Associated Press.

Washington D. C., April 23 .- Afintention of the United States to en- ministration orce reparation, "whenever and wherever the dignity of the United States is flouted," President Wilson bent all the energy of the adminisration today to planning for operaions in Mexico.

The President's statement issued after a cabinet conference in reply to the message received from the Conitutionalist Chief Carranza, declarthat, "we are now dealing only ith those whom Huerta commands ud those who come to his support." from dawn today the wearied chiefs f the War and Navy departments. ecretary of State Bryan and the othcabinet officials hurried from conrence to conference. At the White ouse the cabinet officials, with ounsellor Robert Lansing of the tate department aided the Presient in formulating a reply to Caranza. The situation on the Mexian border was the subject of all the epartment's conferences.

CHARGE GIVEN PASSPORTS.

The fact that Charge O'Shaughnessy had been handed his passports by General Huerta added an acute aspect to the situation, but has been more or less expected. The interests of the United States will be looked after by one or two of the other foreign legations as was the case in the time of the Spanish-American war. Secretary Bryan said that the mere withdrawal of the charge d'affaires did not necessarily mean war. He referred to the fact that precedent showed incidents where war did not follow the departure of a minister in charge with his passports. Reports that O'Shaughnessy had reached Vera Cruz were not credited by the State department. It was said that he had not had time to reach the Mexican capital The department By Associated Press. said that from 800 to 1000 Americans were in Mexico City and that of other legations numbering about the Mexican capital.

The Mexican Conditions

No matter what theory may be held as to the real offending faction, no matter who or what was in the forefront as the immediate cause and no matter against whom or against what faction it is the announced intention to proceed, the fact that this nation will soon be at war with Mexico cannot be denied.

Each passing hour makes it more apparent that the movements of the forces of this nation cannot long be restricted to a movement against Huerta and his adherents and supporters, both in and out of the army, alone.

Not all of the Mexican people are openly allied with one or the other of the contending factions. There are still hund- I'd like to take a week's-end offreds of thousands of Mexicans who have held aloof from any active participation in the struggles of the last half dozen years. The danger is that both the Huerta faction and the Carranza faction will fear that to remain passive, or to become the open allies of this nation, in a conflict which involves only one faction will result in alienating the support of the great number of Mexicans who have so far not taken part in the conflict.

Avowal of hostility to the United States will, in all probability, be made by both the Huerta faction and the Carranza faction before this country has made much progress in the campaign which has been decided upon.

The President and his advisors could not have been unmindful of the existence of such conditions and while in the initial stages of the conflict, the forces of the United States may be directed against one faction, open hostility of the other faction, it is apparent, cannot long be postponed.

So far the Constitutionalists have committed no overt act which would justify this nation in directing a movement of the land and sea forces against them. The Huerta faction, which, according to the theory under which this nation is proceeding, has usurped the government of the Mexican people and which is now holding that government by force, has committed an overt act which demanded, imperatively, that this nation proceed against that faction.

We may all have our beliefs as to the unfitness of Villa to control the destinies of the Mexican people, we may concede that he is morally and mentally as unfit as Huerta, we may concede that his conduct thus far proves him to be equally as vicious as Huerta, but this nation, refusing to recognize any government in Mexico, can only direct the movements of the army and navy against the offending forces.

The aggressions of Huerta, a usurper, and his faction with whom Carranza and Villa and their forces are now engaged in open warfare, cannot be treated as a cause for war against the Constitutionalists.

Because the movements of the land and naval forces of this nation are thus far directed only against Huerta and his 3 New Orleans faction, it does not follow that this nation has allied itself with Villa and his forces nor that it is even operating in sympathy with the Constitutionalist forces.

When another faction in Mexico which has succeeded in wresting the government of the land from the people, or when an armed force attempting to appropriate the government of the Mexican people, offends this nation, then, and then only, will it be proper to send the armed forces of the United States

The situation is peculiar in its features. The President is confronted with a condition which demands careful consideration, one which must be dealt with with great caution to avoid complications of a more serious nature.

Every citizen should refrain from arriving at hasty conclusions and the expression of opinions until the conditions are thoroughly understood. Those Americans who are righteously indignant at the atrocities committed by Villa and his forces, should not find lault with the National government for not now simultaneously with the movement against Huerta, directing a hostile movement against the Constitutionalists.
